Market For Art Treasures

With Returning Property Art Sales Have Been Brisk In London

Yet another indication of Britain's returning property in the manner in which London is recovering her prestige as the best market for literary and art treasures.

The great auction rooms have started the autumn season. Rare jewels from Russia and a magnificent collection of Chinese porcelain are for exceptional prices. A first lot of Chinese porcelain brought $14,500, although in defective condition.

Shortly Charles Fowler's collection of 1300 Japanese lacquer at present in New York will be offered for sale in London, and an Austrian auctioneer is sending a big assortment of books from the library of the Emperor Maximilian to London.

Almost daily are sales which if they elaborate are equally interesting. A first edition of Oscar Reizenstein with original vignette printed in 1850, sold today for $10,000. Incidentally this edition on publication proved a small failure, the majority of copies going into the bookdealer's "ten penny heap."

One of the copies real and a manuscript of verses, "The Try Green," from the Pickwick Papers, sold today for $700. A public book trust was shown in the sale of a number of books, including the first edition of the great English letters of modern times, the whole going for less than $100.
